

Miao Song Joins GLP as Global Chief Information Officer

Singapore, 22 June 2021 – GLP today announced that Miao Song will join the company as its global chief information officer (“CIO”), effective June 22. In her role, Miao will be responsible for all aspects of technology across GLP and overseeing the company’s global data and digital strategy.

Prior to GLP, Miao was the global CIO of Mars Petcare and board member of Mars Belgium where she led the digital transformation of the company to elevate technology, digital and data capabilities. Prior to Mars, she worked at Johnson & Johnson, Royal Dutch Shell and Nestle.

Ming Mei, co-founder and CEO of GLP said: “Technology and the management of information is continuing to reshape industries globally and is becoming increasingly complex. Miao’s diverse set of experiences across industries and disciplines, in both a global and regional capacity, will be invaluable to GLP as we continue to innovate and evolve our business and IT systems.”

She has extensive technology management experience, having headed IT disciplines globally and locally including strategy and planning, program management, project delivery, delivery management (application and infrastructure support and operations), business systems management, business engagement, IT supplier management, and digital transformation.

Throughout her career Miao has been recognized by the industry, most recently being named CIO of the Year Europe 2020 by GDS Group, a global events, research and technology services company. She has lived and worked in China, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Singapore and Belgium, and in her role at GLP she will be based in Singapore.

She is an advocate of diversity and inclusiveness and led the Netherlands D&I council and the IT Women Leadership Institution in Johnson & Johnson and Mars.
